Dear Madam, dear Sir,

The 2030 Agenda is essential to peace and stability worldwide and is becoming an important point of reference for foreign policymakers. As more knowledge about violent conflict and fragility is produced, the relevance of the SDGs to achieving (re)solutions becomes increasingly clear.

The German Federal Foreign Office, SDSN Germany and adelphi cordially invite you to the launch event of a new essay series on foreign policy and SDGs, on 30 April 2019 in Berlin. The event brings together high-level experts from foreign policy, the UN, international think tanks and academia to discuss the concept of 'sustainable foreign policy' - as well as ways to innovate conflict prevention, to manage trade-offs between SDGs and recharge multilateral cooperation.

Speakers

Susanne Baumann - Federal Government Commissioner for Disarmament and Arms Control and Head of the Directorate-General for International Order, the United Nations Army Control at the German Federal Foreign Office

Oli Brown – Associate Fellow, Energy, Environment and Resources Department, Chatham House

Fatima Denton - Director, UNU Institute for Natural Resources in Africa (UNU-INRA)

Adolf Kloke-Lesch – Executive Director, Sustainable Development Solutions Network (SDSN) Germany

David Steven – Senior Fellow and Associate Director, New York University's Center on International Cooperation

The event is moderated by Alexander Carius, Managing Director, adelphi.

We look forward to your participation. The event is public and you are welcome to forward this invitation to interested colleagues. Thank you.

Kind regards,

the Climate Diplomacy Team

The event will be in English. Please register until 15 April 2019 at the latest. For more information about the event and the venue visit the event website.
